American Physicians Establish Medical Department of Hebrew University in Jerusalem

(From our New York correspondent)

A statement, issued by the headquarters of the Keren Hayesod in America, announces that the first steps in the establishment of a medical college in Jerusalem, to form part of the Hebrew University, where all the instruction is to be given in the Hebrew language, revived and modernized, have been taken by three American physcians who have just returned from Palestine, where in the course of a month's stay they purchased a tract of land for the purpose on the Mount of Olives. The plans for the erection of the first set of permanent buildings have been completed in consultation with expert advice in Europe and America, and the actual work of building, it is announced, will begin as soon as the rainy season in Palestine is over. In addition, in order to start certain pressing work immediately, a building has been rented as temporary quarters for a school for research of tropical diseases and a microbiological laboratory.

PERSONALITIES

BY JOSEPH KAYE

(New York Special to The Canadian Jewish Review)

You may have noticed that our Friendly Informer has been missing from this page for some time. And we hope you have missed him as we have, first, because his retentive memory has furnished you with many an interesting episode, and, secondly, because he has helped us to fill out this page, for which we trust you share in our gratitude.

We are pleased, therefore, to present our Friendly Informer again. And he has told us a piquantly amusing story. The timeliness of it concerns the fact that the Republican candidate for Secretary of State of New York is Judge Samuel Joseph. To quote from our Friendly Informer:

"Judge Joseph's widowed sister," he began with a chuckle, "was Mrs. Carrie Koplowitz. Some years ago she married Judge John Henry McCarthy, who, you may remember, was famous in New York City as 'The Little Judge.' When Mrs. McCarthy's son by her first husband was "bar mitzvah" invitations were sent out to the effect that 'Mr. and Mrs. John Henry McCarthy announce the bar mitzvah of their son, etc.'

"McCarthy lived on the lower East Side of New York about twenty-five years ago, and was at one time a candidate for Municipal Court Judge. The district was then comprised of Jewish and Irish communities, and McCarthy established dual campaign headquarters to accommodate each section. But his plan was disappointing in results. In front of his Jewish headquarters on East Broadway he erected a large sign reading: with a translation, of course, in English. Irishmen passing by and reading this sign were piqued at this show of favoritism on the part of a compatriot, and went right off to vote for McCarthy's opponent, Henry M. Goldfogle.

'STIMUHT FUR JOHN HENRY McCARTHY, DER FREUND VON DER YUDEN'

"Incidentally it was commonly reported during that campaign that Judge Goldfogle was of Irish origin, descended from the original Guilfoyles. But, of course, don't give any credit to this report, for it would spoil the story."

The Yiddish daily, "Der Tag," has come out with the interesting announcement that it will shortly begin to publish a Yiddish rendering of the Bible, done by the poet Solomon Bloomgarden, known as "Yehoash." This will be the first time that the Bible, the book that has been translated into every living language of the globe, can be read in Yiddish. Whatever the merits of the language, there is no doubt that Yehoash has done an art work, and for that alone the translation is valuable.

Yehoash has had an interesting career. Of late years he has been active in Jewish communal work, and shared in the organization and functioning of the Jewish Congress. His literary work really began late in life, when he was thirty-one. Actually Yehoash's first poems were written in Hebrew in his early boyhood; later he came under the influence of Peretz, and he himself dates the beginning of his career from then. After the young Bloomgarden had worked for some time on "Dos Yiddish Bibliotheque" he came to America, where, shortly after his arrival, he married and became a writer of fiction. His way to America was paved with dreams of [illegible] he came to [illegible] dreams against the realities of New York life, the result persuaded him that it would not be a great loss to literature if Yehoash ceased writing.

For the next ten years there was hardly a profession or trade that Yehoash did not work at. Then he listened to the advice of one of his numerous bosses to "make himself useful" in life, and engaged in business. And he became almost prosperous. He was then in Denver, and accidentally he happened to meet Jacob Marrinoff, now the editor and publisher of "Der Kundes," the Yiddish humorous weekly. Marrinoff was a man of literary instincts and hopes, but circumstances had made of him at that time a blacksmith. He remembered Yehoash through some poems which the latter had published in "Dos Yiddishe Bibliotheque." He had remembered the poems because they were strikingly different from the works of men like Rosenfeld and Edelstein, whose poems were characteristic of the Jewish poesy of the day. The pen-name, "Yehoash" was also different and sounded heroic and dignified, and caught the reader's eye and imagination. Yehoash, by the way, is the poet's real name; it is a name that has been attached to the Bloomfield family for generations, but is not used in every-day intercourse.

When Marrinoff found that Yehoash was no more Yehoash, but Solomon Bloomgarden, business man, he was keenly disappointed, and urged with all the force of his strong character to establish kinship with Yehoash once more. For a long time Bloomgarden's muse refused to be revived. He resisted on various pretexts, but at length Marinoff's persistent persuasions broke down his resistance, and at the age of thirty Yehoash began writing again.

His success since then has been in accordance with the development of his genius. He has lived mostly in New York, but his inspiration has been sharpened by a visit to Palestine, where he lived in the colony Rochoboth.

Now his highly important work, the Bible translation, may be a thing of imperishable value, or become an antiquated work of reference. Unfortunately it does not depend upon Yehoash, but upon the future of Yiddish as a language. That is the tragedy of Yiddish writers. They put their all into their work and consign it to uncertainty.

We might introduce you here to one of our artists whose greatest success has been in his portraiture of Jewish types. This is William Auerbach-Levy, the etcher. He is really a remarkable artist, somewhat put in the shade by a personality not the equal of the artist. And what should put him in disfavor with you is the fact that he married out of the fold.

Auerbach-Levy was born in Brest-Litovsk around thirty-two years ago and came to New York in his youth. His early days he spent in the vicinity of Henry Street, which to-day is a very dilapidated neighborhood, but was not so bad in those days. William's or Willie's—he is better known by the latter monicker—parents desired him to be a lawyer or a physician, but Willie had thoughts of drawing and indulged in them. His teachers at school seemed to encourage him, and so when he became of age and could assert himself more or less he entered the National Academy of Design in New York. He was accepted, and in a remarkably short time passed through the preliminary copying class. He was at this time barely fourteen years of age, and when he came for his first lesson in the life class the professors glanced at his knee pants and thought of the nude model within. A consultation ensued and resulted in the dispatch of Willie to his home, with a request

Jewish Conditions in Germany

By RABBI CHARLES I. HOFFMAN

I have visited a number of centres of Jewish life in Germany and conversed with some well-informed German Jews, and have been able to gather together some definite impressions of Jewish conditions in this country that it may serve to note and to bring to public attention.

I have been impressed with the beauty of some of the synagogs. In Antwerp, though small, the edifice has a stately exterior and an attractive interior. In this community, as in other cities, the cleavage is not between Reform and Orthodoxy (for only the orthodox ritual is followed), but rather between native and auslaender (foreigner) from Eastern Europe. The latter seems not content to accept the jurisdiction of the established Jewish officials, and prefers to establish a service and authorities of his own. Naturally this has engendered some antagonism. This is manifested especially in the food regulations (Kashruth) and in the schools, that are under separate direction. Of the latter, I shall have more to say later. In Antwerp I met the rabbi who administers the affairs of the long-settled Jews—many of whom are engaged in the diamond trade and have established a diamond bourse, in the basement of which is a well-conducted kosher restaurant. That rabbi delivers his sermons in French, with which country, especially since the war, Belgian sympathies are, of course, more closely allied.

In Cologne there are two fine synagogs, both under the same direction, the organ constituting the difference in service between the one and the other. The one without the organ is the older and is built in the Moorish style of architecture, with beautifully decorated walls and double gallery for women. I attended a Sabbath Mincha service here and sat in semi-darkness, as the afternoon was cloudy and the electric light not utilized at this service. It was well conducted, though not largely attended. The other synagog is on Koenigsplatz opposite a park, and has a beautiful stone façade and large, highly ornate interior. The rabbi's residence forms a part of the structure and here I met Rabbi Leopold Rosenthal and his hospitable wife, active in good works. Rabbi Rosenthal has spent practically his whole life in this community—though he is somewhat past middle-age—and, when the organ was introduced into the larger synagog, changed his supervision and direction to the smaller, though not his residence. The Jews belong to one congregation, but attend either synagog according to their personal predilection. Is not this a fine manifestation of liberality?

Probably the two most observant communities in Germany are those in Halberstadt and Frankfurt-am-Main. In each of these I had the good fortune to spend the Sabbath and was impressed with the beauty and strength of the Jewish life that was manifested, most of all, perhaps, in the smaller community of Halberstadt. The synagog here is in a poor neighborhood, and even in the mean-looking street, I passed to and fro before having pointed out to me the entrance to the synagog. Having passed through the hall, however, the interior of the synagog presented an altogether different appearance. In the vestibule, built in the wall, is a copper basin and spigot for lustrations, that my informant told me was to be found in all synagogs everywhere. There are also special wardrobe rooms for men and women, where outside wraps are deposited and synagog accessories are kept, thus saving the place of worship from these disfiguring additions. Many of the men keep here not only their talesim, with which all are provided, but also their tall silk hats, which the dignity of the divine service requires. There is a non-Jewish person in charge of these rooms and this facilitates and conduces to decorum. I found the minor officials of the synagogs men of good address and intelligence. The shamesh is not a mere janitor, but an important element in the orderly conduct of the service, often attired in clerical uniform and conducting himself with dignity and piety. The service, while not especially impressive, was well conducted and well attended. It was again a demonstration and vindication of unity in Israel that, coming from a distant land, I was able here to feel at home in the service of God. The synagog is richly adorned, especially with two handsome menorahs, the gift of the children of Rabbi Hildesheimer, whose spirit seems to pervade the place, even if he never lived here. What impressed me in Halberstadt was that Jewish life was normal. It was not something exceptional, something additional to the ordinary life of the individual, but it was of its very substance and essence—everything revolved about it, the meals, the work, the social transactions. It was not confined to the synagog, though divine service and study constituted its centre and heart. Men did not think of observance as piety, but as the regular routine of an orderly and proper existence. There was associated with this a Sabbath gladness that gave it a special attractiveness. Even the kosher restaurant, where are many young men engaged in the large industrial establishments located here, took on this character. Everything is regulated strictly in accordance with the prescribed ordinance, even the stoves on which the food is kept warmed for the Sabbath day consumption. As an instance of how life centers around the service and in turn how the service conforms itself to life, I may mention that the Sabbath Mincha service was conducted at 1 p.m., so that the third Sabbath meal could appropriately follow it.

Hirsch's Work in Frankfurt

In Frankfurt-am-Main, the work of Sampson Raphael Hirsch was still on a firm and permanent basis. The synagog on Friedberger Platz is a splendid stone edifice, with a fine approach and a large and handsome interior. On Friday evening a large congregation of women as well as men gathered to welcome the entrance of the Sabbath. On the Sabbath morn the large auditorium was filled with men and the gallery with women. There was just the ordinary service, without sermon. A choir of boys and men added to the harmony devotion. The Chazan's chant was melodious and solemn, somewhat of a monotone, and the congregation followed in intelligent interest, though not participating audibly to any considerable extent. Dignity and decorum prevailed, although men would at times exchange a word of conversation. There was no tendency to chatting since all were attentive and engaged in devotion. How deep the feeling of prayer might have been there was no means of judging. It was as normal on the Sabbath as business was on the week-day, as eating or as sleeping.

There were two other synagogs in Frankfurt that I visited, one on Boerne Strasse near the original home of the Rothschilds, formerly the Yudengasse, the other on Boerne Platz, erected, I believe, when the former introduced the organ. The latter, the larger structure, was having extensive repairs, and was temporarily without a rabbi, the incumbent having passed away some time before. It seemed strange that these strongholds of Judaism should be located on thoroughfares that perpetuated the name of the German publicist who had proven recreant to the faith.

Perhaps it would give a mistaken view of Judaism in Germany if I were to present the foregoing synagogs as entirely typical of Jewish life in this Filming Jewish Solemnities—Soviet Agent's Contempt for Jewish Protests Rathenau Murder Trial Reveals Anti-Semitic Motive—Anti-Jewish Trouble in Budapest and Pressburg—New Book on Israel in Egypt — German Anti-Semitic Films Forbidden — Russia Demands Extradition of Pogrom Organizers.

London, October 7, 1922.

A good deal of feeling has been aroused by the action of the Bow and Bromley Talmud Torah in allowing a film to be taken of the congregation that assembled during worship on Rosh Hashonah. The film was shown at the variety theatres. The "Jewish World" commenting on the event, says: "We presume the permission to film the congregants was not given to the enterprising artist without a consideration and so the incident was nothing less than a miserable exploitation of religious devotion, and introduces yet another terror into the holy day trade to which Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur have so deplorably come in recent years in certain quarters of Jewry."

A similar occurrence is recorded as having taken place at the Philpot Street Synagog during the Yom Kippur service, the congregation, from the minister downwards, posing for the purpose. The film was reproduced in several papers on Yom Kippur night, and on Tuesday morning. The journal already quoted commenting heatedly on the proceedings as a sign of regrettable Jewish degeneration, hopes that the competent authorities will inquire into them with a view to preventing their repetition. A similar though less ostentatious film operation was carried out at the Great Synagog, but outside the building, and included only children.

A special prayer has been authorized by the Chief Rabbi in the form of a thanksgiving for the National Home on the occasion of the approval by the League of Nations of the British Mandate. The prayer or thanksgiving is couched in the language of the deepest gratitude and boundless joy, quoted mainly from passages in Holy Writ suitable to the occasion, to be used in all the synagogs.

Mr. Lucien Wolf, writing on behalf of the Joint Committee to the Official Agent in Great Britain of the Russian Soviet Republic, complained in very precise terms—and some think unnecessarily pointed language—first, of the laws and decrees recently enacted by the Soviet government prohibiting every kind of religious instruction in public and private schools and other cultural institutions, and of the harshness of their application against Jews, asking him to communicate the (somewhat critical) views of the letter to the government in Moscow, in the hope that the methods of the application of the exceptional legislation might be mitigated. Without seeking to suggest that the note might not have been couched in less irritating terms, the reply of the Official Agent of the Russian Republic is certainly surprising in its contemptuous decision "not to transmit the communication to my government or to enter into any correspondence in the matter owing to the false and baseless accusations," he says contained therein, and the insolent tone in which the charges are made." The "Jewish Chronicle" appears to be reasonable enough to know whether the charges are false and baseless or whether the Agent has made a brutum and [illegible] charges.

The "Jewish [illegible] editorial comment on the matter, but in selection of the correspondence it sends its readers that the secretaries of the Emperor of all the Russias similarly refused to transmit a similar protest by the citizens of London against similar persecution of the Jews, and aptly quotes the French, "Plus ça change plus c'est la même chose," and as aptly observes that the incident casts ridicule on the pretense of the "Morning Post" that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement.

Some extracts from the German press on the examination of the defendants in the Rathenau murder case appearing in the London papers expose clearly a phase of anti-Jewish mentality which is pretty widely known, but does not so frequently come into the light of day. One of the defendants, Techow, who drove the assassin's car, in the course of his examination said that, according to Kearns, another defendant, harm had been done to Germany by the Rapallo agreement and the policy of fulfillment, adding a good deal of anti-Semitism with reference to the alleged influence of the "Elders of Zion" on the destiny of the world, all of which, says the report, brought the murder to its proper level as a pathological rather than a political crime.

A message from Budapest on October 4 talks of great excitement in the local high schools owing to an alleged favoritism shown by a local business establishment, which warmly resents the charge. The malcontents require the withdrawal of certain categories of Jews from the high schools and require certain limitations to the rights of those who remain. The excitement ran so high at the technical high school that it had to be closed for a period, and the scholars will determine their future conduct only after learning the attitude of the Minister of Instruction on the subject. There was trouble also at the Pressburg University, where the Jewish students were compelled to leave the lecture hall. Here fighting resulted, which, if continued, says the rector, will lead to the closing of the lectures for a period.

A little book barely more than a tract, by W. M. Flinders Petrie, D.C.L., etc., issued by George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., embodies the fifth Arthur Davis memorial lecture and illustrates Prof. Petrie's gifts, both as a scholar and a teacher. It is entitled "The Jews in Egypt." Unlike the majority of scholars, says the critique on the book in the "Times," he does not attempt to convey one fraction of his vast knowledge to his audience. What he aims at and succeeds in transmitting is the vision which his own mind has projected from its wealth of knowledge, with just enough dry fact to give the vision substantial fabric, and firm base in the mind of the amateur. If only this gift were more general and specialists could administer education in this almost tabloid form, not as propaganda, but as a means of widening the field of vision of, for instance, our rulers and politicians round a particular point, what blunders and perplexities, if not warfare, we might be saved! Here we are given a flood of illumination not only on the Jews in Egypt, but thereby on the Semitic question in general, concludes the critique on the brochure.

Perhaps the following German note may be quoted from the "Jewish Guardian" to add to the preceding Continental items. The German government has prohibited the production of anti-Semitic films. The editor of the anti-Semitic Bavarian organ, the "Volkischer Beobachter," has been fined for libeling the rabbi, Dr. Beerman.

The Sports Council of Vienna has decided not to give financial support to those clubs that exclude Jews from their ranks.

On the other hand, there is an item of interest from Russia appearing to indicate a desire to be fair to persecuted Jews, if only for a moment, the Soviet Government having approached the Polish Government requiring the extradition of the Ukraine pogrom organizers of the raids on several Jewish towns, resulting in the murder of many Jews, saying that the Soviet troops had pursued the raiders, but that the leaders had escaped into Poland, where they are interned.

Rabbi Solomon Tagir of Beyrout has been appointed chief rabbi of Syria.

IS THE BALFOUR DECLARATION IN DANGER?

WITH the fall of the Lloyd George Government and the formation of a new Cabinet, comes the query: What of England's policy in Palestine? His Majesty's Government under the leadership of Lloyd George entered into a contract with the Jews of the world for the re-establishment of Palestine as a Jewish homeland. This contract was ratified by the League of Nations, which made Great Britain the mandatory power over Palestine. Recent news dispatches from England, contained chiefly in the anti-Semitic press of the late Lord Northcliffe and Lord Beaverbrook, indicate that the government which is to be formed by Bonar Law is being urged to repudiate the Balfour Declaration. On the heels of this renewed propaganda comes the threat of pogroms by the Arabs in Palestine.

There is no doubt that the situation is a serious one, and one which is giving the Zionist leaders much concern.

We are not surprised that the enemies of Zionism in England, who happen to be among the arch reactionaries and die-hards, should take advantage of this opportunity to stir up public sentiment against the Mandate, and endeavor to bring pressure on Bonar Law to revoke the Balfour Declaration. In order to prove to the world that they are not riding a wooden charger, these die-hards spur the Arab effendis in London, who are opposed to Zionism, and who control the Arab press in Palestine, to start pogroms. Nevertheless, we refuse to get excited over the whole matter.

The Balfour Declaration and the English Mandate over Palestine are part and parcel of Great Britain's foreign policy. She is committed to it through a treaty and a promise. We are certain that the British foreign office can be trusted to keep its treaties and its promises regardless of changes in premiers or cabinets. England, to our knowledge, has never yet broken her treaty obligations. In the last war she stood up for the rights of small and oppressed nationalities.

In the words of Lloyd George, spoken recently at Leeds: "What next? We also segregated a number of races who had for centuries been under the rule of the oppressor in Central and Southern Europe —the Poles, the Czechoslovaks, the people of Transylvania, the Slavs of Jugoslavia, the Arabs of Asia. Populations which numbered in the aggregate 100,000,000, and had for centuries been groaning under the rule of oppression and terrorism, who had their liberties destroyed, their independence gone and the development of their national life hindered, were freed by one great act, prepared in Paris, signed at Versailles, and which has given a charter of freedom to tens of millions of people." The Palestine Mandate and the Balfour Declaration are in direct line with this traditional policy of Great Britain.

We must not, however, be led to believe that Great Britain's contract with the Jewish people, so far as Palestine is concerned, is wholly and solely altruistic or one-sided, with the Jews as recipients and England as the donor of a great gift. To be sure, England has a strong Biblical tradition. Millions of Britishers all over the world believe with the faith so universal among Christians that England is but the instrument of God, who is fulfilling His promise given to His prophets, that Israel would again be re-established in Zion. Millions of Christians who believe in the second coming of Jesus, believe that this event must be preceded by the return of dispersed Israel to Palestine. Undoubtedly so profound a belief held by millions of Britishers, influences the attitude of England to Zionism.

Yet, leaving this consideration wholly aside, there is a purely practical and diplomatic reason which motivates England's policy in Palestine. That motive is to have a friendly neutral people like the Jews in Palestine, which lies between Egypt and India. England must protect the Suez Canal, and it is to her interest to have the Jews in a buffer position. England knows that she can rely on the loyalty and patriotism of the Jews in time of trouble. Is it not better for England to have the Jews in Palestine to keep peace there than to have a costly standing military force, armed to the teeth, which would be a constant source of irritation to the natives? For it is well known that the Jews are a stabilizing force and easily fraternize with the Arabs, who are racially their first cousins.

Lloyd George in his last speech said that "Owing to the way in which Winston Churchill has handled Mesopotamia and Palestine the cost there has been brought down to almost a minimum." This means that the Mandate is not a charge on the English taxpayer, and all attempts to stir up trouble along these lines are doomed to failure. We are not worried that the change in cabinet in England may mean a change in her policy towards Palestine. We feel certain that England will hold up her end of the contract. But we are worried over the fact that the Jews of the world may not live up to their promises and side of the contract. Since the Jewish people and Palestine have become subjects of open diplomatic discussion, the Zionist leaders have been promising that if Zionism became the recognized and acknowledged policy of the powers of the world, the Jews would stand ready to build up Palestine by contributing the requisite quota in men and money. The former have been forthcoming. Our Chaluzim are making wonderful pioneers. Ten thousand have already entered the land, hundreds of thousands wish to follow them, but—and here lies the obstruction—not the doors of Palestine are closed but the pockets of the rich Jews. If the wealthy Jews of the world could only appreciate that England is doing her share and that upon them devolves the responsibility for the enactment of promises made to England by our Zionist leaders! The new cabinet now being formed by Bonar Law, who as a friend of Zionism helped us considerably, will find among its first duties the task of reviewing what world Jewry has already done to live up to its end of the agreement. The results are none too encouraging. Let those who may glory in the present campaign of the English reactionaries and die-hards against Zionism bethink themselves ere they glory. Our failure in the next few years to keep our contract may endanger the position of world Jewry more than we can calculate at present. The eyes of the world are upon us. What we do in the next few years will determine whether we are serious about our Jewish homeland. For two thousand years we have prayed for Zion. The time has come to do something more substantial. The Jews of the world have it in their own hands to make the Balfour declaration a reality.

A new building designed especially for 'semi-finished" family washing

Some years ago family washing was the small end of the laundry business because most homes had laundresses. Through our vision and constant improvement, family washings, are now done mostly in our plant. "Semi-Finished" is a specialty of our own. We inaugurated it in Toronto, were pioneers in installing soft water and pure soap, and have always done each wash separately and without marking. This has resulted in a volume of business now requiring larger premises, and these are being erected. They will be unequalled in America when finished, and it will be your privilege to use this service at a lower rate than you can have the washing done at home. Phone

CABINET CHANGE WILL NOT AFFECT BRITISH POLICY IN PALESTINE, SAYS COL. WEDGWOOD

Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, M.P., Vice-President of the British Labor Party who addressed the Poale Zion convention here last week and who is now touring the United States in the interests of the Palestine Foundation Fund (Keren Hayesod), in a statement issued through the headquarters of the Fund on the present political situation in England, says that the change of government will produce no change in British policy in Palestine. He believes further that the Palestine issue will not figure in the present general election campaign.

"The Balfour Declaration," says Col. Wedgwood, "has become an integral part of British foreign policy, and no party would declare itself against it. In any case such opposition would find no support in the English electorate. Speaking of Federated Charities campaigns and the needs for the winter of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, "the Drifter" in "The Nation" cites a case that is an inspiration to all giving for the relief of suffering humanity:

"It was at the Temple Emanu-El on Prospect Avenue, Mount Vernon, on the evening of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, the most solemn day of the year for religious Jews. This particular synagog is orthodox, small in membership, and not particularly wealthy. Rising in the pulpit Rabbi Elias Margolis spoke feelingly about the plight of the children in the Hebrew national orphan asylum nearby—how they were suffering from want of funds—lacking shoes, clothing, food, and medical attention. Women and even men in the congregation were moved to tears. More than that they were moved also to action. In fifteen minutes this congregation of eighty-five souls had pledged $55,000. But that was not all. Two dentists, Dr. Cooper and Dr. Feldman, tendered their services to the asylum gratis for a year. A physician, Dr. Scaison, made the same offer. Mr. Klein, a shoemaker, went even further; he offered to do the entire shoe repairing for the orphans, 270 children, for a year free of charge. But Dr. Margolis had not finished. These orphans cannot live by bread alone, he told his congregation, or words to that effect, and $1,000 more was subscribed to begin musical instruction for the children who appeared to have talent.

"The Drifter is not much given to statistics, nor is he, as a rule, interested in comparisons, but he wonders whether the great giving epoch which we have just passed through contains anything more inspiring than the unrecorded episode of this little Mount Vernon synagog. Of one thing he feels certain—that its pastor is a man of rare eloquence."

The Mexican government's invitation to Jewish colonists was "premature, exaggerated and inspired," an official statement is credited with saying. It seems the offer was for all classes of Europeans, not just for Jews. We suspected right off that it was a little too flattering. The only thing left to do is to teeter back and forth on the fence, stick our tongue out far and ask who ever wanted to go to Mexico, anyway?

"The average Jew is spending too much time and effort in deliberation of methods whereby he may controvert calumny. Too few efforts constructive in nature are attempted. We all resent being attacked in a slanderous manner; but what are we doing to help the Jew to a better understanding of himself? We try to proclaim the good deeds of public-spirited citizens of Jewish origin without sufficiently encouraging more and ever more Jews to join their ranks. In the last few years we have printed reams of literature designated to set the Jew correctly before the Gentile (on a chance that the latter will read it all), but we are not making strong enough effort to set the Jew right in his own eyes. They way to show one's worth is to prove it through devotion to community work."—Mrs. Moses Purvin, president Chicago Council of Jewish Women.

Rabbi Judah L. Magnes is a radical. He was arrested once for being too strong a champion of free speech in the States. Now he is a contributing editor to "Deb's Magazine," but there was a time when he was rabbi of Temple Emanu-El in New York. What a shudder must animate the conservative, black-taffeta ladies there, when they think of this man who wants to help Debs to nationalize American industries!

MR. SAMUEL BERGER ADDRESSES MENORAH SOCIETY ON HILLAIRE BELLOC'S "THE JEWS"

A large and appreciative body of students attended the first open meeting of the University of Toronto Menorah Society on Saturday evening. The enthusiasm displayed by undergraduates of both sexes augurs well for the success of the coming year. The number of students already enrolled exceeds the total number of enrolled last year, and a record year is looked forward to.

The feature of the program was an interesting address by Mr. Samuel Berger of Ottawa.

The speaker explained and replied to some of the most salient criticisms levelled at the Jewish race by Hillaire Belloc in his recent book, "The Jews."

The speaker declared that Belloc, while pretending to be friendly, was adopting this attitude merely as a disguise for real venom. Mr. Berger quoted at length passages from the text which the most casual observer would brand as willful misrepresentation. Belloc has exaggerated the Jewish importance and influence in the politics and destinies of the particular nations or peoples amongst whom they happen to live. The speaker took issue with Belloc's statement that the Jewish people were more represented in the Bolshevik movement than other races.

Belloc is also guilty of self-contradiction. On the same page Belloc accuses the Jew of having radical leanings, and then makes the assertion that the Jews have a tendency to monopolize industry. This is somewhat of an anomaly.

Mr. Berger urged a more tolerant view of racial differences and declared that Hillaire Belloc was creating a problem where none existed.

Numerous complaints have been received at Warsaw from Jewish soldiers in different regiments that they were not given leave to observe Rosh Hashonah. The Polish general staff having issued instructions to all regiments to grant leave to the Jewish officers and men, the National Jewish Council is taking the matter up with the high command.

Montague Gluckstein, head of Solomon and Gluckstein, tobacconists, and of the Lyons chain restaurants, died at his home in London, England, on October 8. Mr. Gluckstein founded the present firm some thirty years ago on a very small scale. The tobacco shops and tea rooms now employ 40,000 persons.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

Social Service Head Demands Trained Volunteers. National Jewish Conference Head Discusses Philanthropy

New York City.—One of the prominent women in the world of Jewish affairs to-day is Miss Frances Taussig, president of the National Conference of Jewish Social Service. In the recent issue of "The Jewish Woman," the national publication of the Council of Jewish Women, Miss Taussig contributes a very thoughtful article on, "The Volunteer in Social Service." She gives the following estimate of the volunteer's role:

"The rise of the paid worker and the beginning of the Federation movement by no means meant the end of the influence of the volunteer in social work. Leadership was assumed but slowly by the paid worker. Within the movement itself, volunteer leaders developed without whom the progress in social work of the last twenty years would have been impossible. In protest, often justified, against the new 'scientific' methods of this new organized charity, arose myriads of small societies, each representing an expression of the desire of some small group to serve and to fill some need, to which the professional workers closed their eyes.

"Undoubtedly stimulated by the vision of the volunteer and aided by their protests, there was gradually established a new conception of what professional social work should be. Training for social work had its birth and its whole development in this period. Social workers slowly began, through personality, training and the nature of their conviction for their work, to be a truly professional group, expressing a new influence in community affairs, and formulating standards which the volunteer leaders who stood by them helped to put into effect.

"Until the beginning of the war, certain well-defined fields for the activity of the volunteer existed. Membership on boards might mean much or little activity. The work of friendly visitors varied between a well-meant interference in the affairs of a family, and the sort of participation of their problems which was possible only to a real friend. A few devoted spirits gave themselves without limit to a chosen cause, with no compensation except the satisfaction of accomplishment.

"With the war, however, opportunities for service were multiplied with the armies abroad and in behalf of their families at home, and in all of the fields from which workers had been taken for war service. New capabilities were discovered, and everyone found a way to give service, if only in knitting.

"It was soon found, though, that the work of war-time volunteers had to be standardized, that soldiers could not march in improperly knitted stockings, that the families of soldiers had a right to the skilled, efficient and sympathetic service of the best people who could be drawn into the field, and it was soon decided that volunteers must be trained, whether to knit or to help families. No one refused training, and men and women who for years had not seen the inside of a text-book, went to school, listened to lectures, and anxiously awaited the results of the examinations which would prove them ready to serve.

"Volunteers no longer are trained for social work. The fault lies not entirely with them, but with the social agencies who fail to bring to this large group of potential workers in the community, the worthiness of the service which they can give, and the need which exists for it. Social workers themselves have a definite responsibility toward these volunteers. They must be able to offer to volunteers the opportunities for training and for experience which will be worthy and dignified in the eyes of those who are willing to give themselves to the community's service. The volunteer must be ready to accept the smallest or the largest service, demanding only that it shall make of the need which it is intended to fill, no less than a contribution which they themselves, in a similar relation, are sincerely attempting to make."

The Latvian overnment has granted a French syndicate concessions to operate a gambling casino in Riga, on the express condition that no Jews be permitted to participate in the founding of the "joint" or to play therein. A number of newspapers, both Jewish and non-Jewish, declare that the concession is unconstitutional because it bars part of the population from such social enterprise.

Rabbi Brickner at Campaign Dinner Makes Strong Plea for Community Federation

Rabbi B. R. Brickner addressed the campaign dinner of the Federation of Community Service. In his address he pointed out the value of Federation and urged the wealthy people of the city to be more liberal in their contributions and support of the Community Federation. He showed that the large number of subscribers to the Federation now has indicated that the average wage-earner in the city was contributing, but that it was the wealthier people that were falling behind.

In connection with the foregoing, Rabbi Brickner tells the story of a woman who heads a big house in Toronto, and of her ten lady-maids. The story, as told by one of the women canvassers, is that she attempted to see the woman of the house, but was told that the woman had not the time to bother with such things, but she would give a dollar. So she sent that contribution by her maid. The maid, being humbled by the gift, was apologetic. She thought that was hardly the gift which should come from a household capable of supporting ten maids, so she got the balance of the maids together, and they gave a dollar and a half each. So, says Rabbi Brickner, the person just a little below the average is doing his and her duty, while the so-called big men and women are not measuring up.

Federation Notes

By S. B. K. Kauffman

ORPHANAGE

The Jewish community has for many years been wishing and hoping for a new orphanage—a new building with proper facilities to house the dependent and neglected children of Toronto. The Orphanage Committee of the Federation was successful in securing a beautiful building for a new Home. Money must be forthcoming immediately, in order to complete the purchase and committees are now out to solicit from those who subscribed at the last campaign held in May, 1921.

There are thousands who have not yet subscribed to the Orphanage and who, no doubt, wish to participate in the upbuilding of this new institution. As it will be impossible to see everybody, those who desire to contribute are kindly requested to mail their donations to the treasurer of the Federation, Mr. Charles Draimin, 256 Yonge St.

Every Jew, yes, every human being, feels with the orphan and the neglected child, and the man or woman who does not respond cheerfully to their appeal, lacks the human and Jewish heart. Give, give, whatever you can to the orphan, to the neglected child. We earnestly feel that there will be a generous response even from those who have not yet subscribed.

The following is a partial list of those who have paid either in part or in full: D. Dunkelman, $500.00; H. Greisman $500.00; E. Pullan, $500.00; H. Franklin, $500.00; C. Vigorous Revival at Talmud Torah Meeting

The meeting of the members and subscribers of the proposed Talmud Torah on Brunswick Avenue, held at the Zion Institute, on Sunday, October 22, was the scene of a very promising re-organization. Many prominent men favored the elaborate plans for a modern and beautiful Talmud Torah building, which will be the pride of Toronto's Jewry, and re-affirmed their sincere interest in this all-important undertaking. Confidence in the practical realization of these plans was completely restored, thanks to Rabbi Gordon, Rabbi Weinreb and Rabbi Siegel, who addressed the meeting and inspired those present with a new enthusiasm. To signalize in an official manner this favorable turn of circumstance and sentiment, new officers and a new building committee were elected. Mr. M. Gelber, who was the unanimous choice for president, assured the meeting that it was his intention to proceed to immediate construction and the work would begin within the next two weeks. The other officers and the members of the building committee endorsed this sentiment, and pledged their whole-hearted co-operation.

A new Collegiate class, in addition to the two regular Collegiate classes, will be opened. Subjects of instruction for the year will be post-Biblical Jewish history, current Jewish events, and the Jew in English fiction. All the boys of the Sunday school will be organized as the Junior Congregation, and will conduct the services on Saturday afternoon. The chazan, the reader, etc., will be appointed by the boys themselves, from among their own number.

The committee appointed by the Women's Auxiliary of the Goel Tzedek Congregation, to organize a Mothers' Club for the Simcoe Street Talmud Torah, has called a meeting for Sunday, October 29, at 3 p.m. The mothers of the children attending the Talmud Torah have been invited to attend this meeting, and the committee also extends an invitation to all women interested in the organization of this Mothers' Club, which will function as the women's auxiliary of the Talmud Torah. Rabbi Gordon, Mr. Nathanson and Rabbi Siegel will address the meeting. Mr. M. Gelber and Mr. L. Levinsky will be present as interested guests to greet the assembly and recognize it officially as an auxiliary organization.

The order for the immediate expulsion of the Jewish tenants on the Zamojski estate at Wyoska has been stayed by the district court of Lublin, to whom the Jews appealed against the court's decision. The proposed ejection involved some eighty Jewish families, resident on the estate over a century. The hundred-year lease having expired, the Jews were ordered to liquidate their interests and to move on.

An agreement providing for the care of Jewish emigrants from Russia as far as the Polish frontier, has been concluded at Warsaw by the directors of the United Jewish emigration committees with the Russian "Yidgescom," the latter undertaking to establish offices to facilitate the travel of the emigrant.

REPORT ON THE HEBREW MATERNITY AID, MOTHERS' AND BABES' SUMMER REST HOME

By Mrs. M. S. Till, Chairman

After many years of dreaming and planning on the part of the officers of the Hebrew Maternity Aid Society, the Mothers' and Babes' Summer Rest Home became a reality on the 18th of June, when the formal opening of the cottage at Bronte took place. To all the workers gathered there, this event will long remain a happy remembrance.

Rabbi Julius Siegel, as chairman, assisted in making this day the success it was, and no small part was played by the visitors (not forgetting those from Hamilton).

Seven successful bridge parties, one food sale, and also a linen shower, which was held at the home of Mrs. A. Samuels, is ample proof of the intense interest shown in this work by the committee, to whom no small amount of the credit is due.

The work as carried on during the summer, proved a success beyond the expectations of those responsible for the outlining of plans; Mesdames I. H. Siegel, M. S. Till, S. Helpert, convenors of the cottage.

The location was as good as was possible to secure for such an undertaking, situated in a quiet and easily reached spot, facing the lake, while the kindness of the neighbours—particularly that of the owners of the cottage—was most encouraging and highly appreciated. The bedrooms were large and airy, while the two dining-rooms accommodated mothers and children separately, so that the former might better enjoy their meals untroubled and at their leisure.

The health of the parties was particularly good, while on their return at the expiration of their alloted time (from two to four weeks), their conditions showed marked improvement.

In all, forty mothers and eighty-six children enjoyed a vacation at the Rest Home, and our only regret is that we were unable to accommodate more, for we had to disappoint some twenty mothers and seventy-five children on this account. Looking ahead to next season, when we expect to continue the good work, it is our hope to extend the accommodations, through a portable building or a tent.

Little expense was incurred for transportation, thanks to the many big-hearted friends who came to our assistance with their cars, this branch of the work being ably looked after by Mrs. L. Yolles and Mrs. S. Helpert.

A Jewish cook was in charge, who provided the guests with kosher food, while Mrs. M. Narrol and Mrs. M. Simon looked after the provisions sent from Toronto.

Mr. William Clavir earned the everlasting gratitude of our committee through his good work in delivering the parcels to Bronte. Gratefully, we also wish to mention Messrs. L. Prager, M. Wilder, and Mr. Fauman, of Hamilton. It was our good fortune to secure Miss Anne Brenner, graduate nurse of the Mount Sinai Hospital, N.Y., to whom we owe gratitude for the sympathetic and able manner in which she supervised the home. Sharing in the credit with Miss Brenner, are to be mentioned the names of the volunteer workers: Mesdames S. Helpert, M. S. Till, I. H. Siegel, M. Simon, Lewis, Charles Godfrey, S. Hansher, D. Levinne. The Maternity Aid takes this opportunity of expressing their thanks to the officers and the rest of the committee who so ably assisted at all times.

The Rest Home committee were at all times in co-operation, through the Federation office, with the Junior Council camp at Whitby and the Boys' Camp, at Stop 34, Highway, where the elder children were sent, while the mothers and children up to seven years of age and infants were at our Rest Home.

The Society is specially indebted to the Star Fresh Air Fund, for their kind contribution of $707.50.

The books are at present in the hands of the auditor, and we hope to publish a complete financial statement shortly.

The committee take this opportunity to thank all those who have contributed, both in cash and merchandise, and so assisted to carry on this good work for the season, and also wish to thank Miss Malka Halpern, Federation visiting nurse, who assisted—Mrs. I. H. Siegel in investigating the cases.

RUSSIAN OPERA REMARKABLY SPIRITED

Popular opera à la Russe—but popular opera of a quality altogether new and startling in its dramatic effect will be brought to this city by the Russian Grand Opera Company which will fill a limited engagement at Massey Hall beginning Friday evening, November 3rd.

Through a striking intensity of expression, both in music and acting, the members of this operatic troupe will cause virtually a radical modification in the viewpoint of local devotees of the operatic arts.

Certainly the undertaking of these Russians is unique. They have ventured to bring to an alien shore a language and an art which are singularly typical of their race. They invest their work with an emotional fervor which sweeps over obstacles and carries to the audience a spirit that has its source in a great national impulse toward the beautiful. And this spirit, as much as any other one thing, reaches vibrantly across the foot-lights to the audience which draws from it an inspiration that is fresh and invigorating.

Dramatically, as well as musically, the company exhibits a strong fibre. The members act and feel, and have an admirable consciousness of what they are doing. They know the life of Russia, the music of Russia, the literature of Russia and what they offer is an authentic and incomparable interpretation of all three.

LOEW'S YONGE STREET

The members of the company engaged in filming the big western picture, "The Cowboy and the Lady," which comes to Loew's Yonge Street Theater, with the regular vaudeville, the entire week of October 30, recently were treated to a thrill that was not on their production roster.

Returning from Wyoming, whence the company had gone to secure locations in the country of which the author wrote, the private railway car containing the members of the company was bumped by another train. Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore, featured players in the picture, were badly bruised by the impact, in addition to being cut by flying glass. Viora Daniel and Patricia Palmer, prominent members of the supporting cast, suffered similar injuries.

For an unrehearsed scene everybody played his part with lifelike fidelity, the only appliances necessary to record the action that were absent being the cameraman and the director's megaphone.

The appalling death rate among the Jewish colonists in the Nikolayev region and other South Russian provinces is best shown in vital statistics compiled for the months of April, May and June, among the worst of the famine months. In April there were 172 births and 1,172 deaths; in May, 143 births and 1,772 deaths; and in June, 74 births and 1,743 deaths; an approximate average of 22 deaths to every birth.

The Liberal press in Saxony and other parts of Germany is extremely indignant at the order issued by the Ministry of Education in Saxony on December 1, according to which Jewish children and teachers are required to attend school during the Jewish high festivals. The order compels attendance at school on all days not recognized by the state as holidays, and Catholics and to a less extent Protestants are also affected. The demand is made that the order should be rescinded immediately.

Mr. H. Jokelson has been created a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services in connection with the transport of the British army during the war.

The Budapest School of Technology has been ordered closed, following the students' threat of resorting to violence unless the Jewish students are barred until such time as the number of Jews in the engineering profession is reduced to five per cent. of the number of engineers in the country.

Jewish emigrants from Germany were seriously considering the possibility of settlement in Mexico, but the Jewish press and the responsible leaders of Germany are warning them against acting hastily.

Because Vladimir Jabotinsky insisted on speaking Russian at a celebration of Russian Zionists in Berlin, the meeting came to a sorry ending, the chairman bringing the exercises to a close upon finding that the noise-makers would not subside.

A Jewish member of the Hungarian Diet, Deputy Paul Sandor, recently interpolated the government on the accusations of the anti-Semites that the Jews had been guilty of treason to the state during the Roumanian invasion of Hungary. The deputy was able to demonstrate the innocence of the Jews and prove that the "Awakening Magyars," the party of reaction, were the real culprits. He demanded an investigation of the whole matter.

American relatives of forty-seven Jewish orphans in Warsaw will shortly be reunited with these temporary wards of the Joint Distribution Committee, for they will soon be sailing for the United States, their passage being defrayed by the aforementioned organization.

The first meeting of the Maccabean Circle was held at the Windsor Hotel on October 22nd in the Ladies' Ordinary instead of in the Oak Room, as had been previously planned, because of the large number that attended. The speaker of the afternoon, Dean Craing, of McGill University, drew a parallel between Roman and Jewish history, making an interesting comparison between the religions and culture of both the Romans and Jews. Miss Evelyn Shapiro played the piano, giving a number by Liszt, and a sonata by Scarlati. A vote of thanks was moved by Harry Batshaw, and seconded by Norman Vineberg.

The opening meeting of the Musical and Dramatic Club (Local Council of Jewish Women) will be held at the home of Mrs. Alan Hunt, 600 Argyle Avenue, on Sunday, October 29, at 3 p.m. The program is as follows: Piano solo, "Fantasia in C Minor," Mozart, Mrs. A. Snyder; vocal solo, "The Witches' May Song," Mendelssohn; "The Little Damozel," Novello, Miss Henrietta Pinsler; recitation, "The Organist," A. Lampman, Miss Jessie Bloomfeld; violin solo, "Sonata," Beethoven, Mr. Cantor; accompanists, Miss Evelyn Shapiro, Miss Rosa Black.

McGill was victorious at the Intercollegiate track meet held at the Percival Molson Stadium last Friday afternoon. The final score was 83 to 39 in favor of McGill. Among those who helped pile up the points for McGill were Amaron and Freeman, who came 2nd and 3rd respectively in throwing the 6 lb. hammer.

The graduating exercises of the Montreal High School were held last evening in the Assembly Hall. Mr. W. S. Weldon presided, and the school-leaving certificates were presented to the boys and girls. Then followed the reading of the valedictories, for the girls' school by Daphne Holt; for the boys' school by Milton Doushkness. Among those to receive medals and prizes were the following: Ruth Coleman, commissioners' silver medal as "Dux" of the high school for girls; Eva Zaltaman, L'Alliance Française (1st prize) for French; Harry Covicy, L'Alliance Française (2nd prize) for French; Eileen Smith, 1st Couture prize for singing; Alice Raphael, 2nd Couture prize for singing; Robert B. McLeod, Murray silver medal as "Dux" of the high school of Montreal; Reginald Perry, Governor-General's silver medal as head of the science division; Albert Ernest, George Murray medal for Latin; Harry Covicy, 1st R. Squire Hall prize for French; Saul Solomon, 2nd R. Squire Hall prize for French.

Conditions in Germany

country. It is true that orthodox Judaism is strong and aggressive; conservative Judaism is holding its own and reform Judaism weak, almost moribund. I was told by a Jewish scholar in Berlin that the synagog made widely known by Holdheim while possessed of two young and able rabbis, was really lacking in vitality. Many German Jews are not observant and the problems of Judaism are largely outside of their ken. Even under the Republic however, everyone is required to make a declaration of affiliation or non-affiliation with the Jewish community and its synagogs. The state is still the active agent of the church in pecuniary and other concerns. It requires affirmative action to withdraw from the congregation and as this affects also the rights of marriage and burial and perhaps other interests, the principal of laissez faire operates towards identification rather than, as with us, towards non-affiliation.

Jewish Education

Jewish education is here as generally an important element in Jewish life. In the cities that I visited, the Jewish parish school included general as well as Jewish branches. In some cities only the primary schools were thus constituted, in others, notably in the Real Schule in Frankfurt, they continued in the secondary schools as well, as far as the German gymnasium. There can be little doubt that the results in the Jewish branches were far more adequate than is the rule with us, and for obvious reasons; the teachers, mostly men, are trained, the instruction is regular and constant. In Halberstadt I observed two boys, one of eight and the other of ten, following the reading of the Torah with intelligent interest and understanding. In Frankfurt, one bright lad not yet bar mitzvah had already for some time been introduced into the Talmud.

I was told that the ingenuous Jewish youth had, especially since the war, shown an increased interest in Jewish studies, shown in their attendance at Jewish high schools for the study of Jewish branches.

Jewish scholarship, though it had met with reverses and losses, and was suffering pecuniarily, making it susceptible to American tenders of scholarships, was active and productive, and not without prospect of adding to the number of Jewish scholars whose lives were devoted to the promotion of Jewish learning (Wissenschaft). An academy to promote Jewish learning had been established, and included many of the leading Jewish scholars. It was earnestly and enthusiastically urged that this might be made international and include America as well as other lands. The Hoch-Schule in Berlin is devoted to Jewish learning, having largely lost its party tendency, and includes in its faculty conservative as well as reform Jews (neologues as they are here called).

Zionism in Germany

I was surprised to find how considerable were the dimensions of the non-Zionist element in German Jewry. It may have been accidental, but in Halberstadt and Frankfurt I ran into strongholds of the Agudas Israel, that, aggressive in their orthodoxy, are outside the Zionist bulwarks. In Cologne I attended a Zionist Herzl meeting addressed among others by an old-time Zionist, Dr. Bodenheimer. Quite a considerable number of those present were auslaender. The speaker referred to Herzl's disappointment when he met with opposition from financial magnates and rabbis to whom he had turned in the first instance expecting their cordial co-operation. The ultra-orthodox in Germany, though strong and aggressive, are separatist and reactionary. An instance of this is shown in a recent conference, in which it was declared that to give Jewish women any active and official part in Jewish congregational life was antagonistic to Jewish principles and could not be allowed.

German Woes and Weal

Indeed, the Jews in Germany as well as the German nation generally, are in an unhappy and depressed condition. The bitterness and violence of the anti-Semitic movement as manifested in the murder of Rathenau and others has increased the sensitive and nervous position which the Jews occupy in public life. The present regime is favorable, and with its continuance there will probably be a subsidence of anti-Semitism. If reaction should succeed and the nationalists and monarchists once more leap into the saddle, there would hardly be any more living possible for Jews in Germany. Fortunately such an eventuality is not likely. The people, though suffering and dissatisfied and somewhat morose, have no marked tendency to recur to old conditions. Here and there is a lingering regard for German nobility that gave the land its prestige and military glory, but the present administration in Berlin is sane and conservative, and though sailing in troubled waters, should have with it the sympathy of the worthy. Justly as Germany suffers for its misguided past, still I feel like joining in the call of its president, Ebert, to the German youth at the recent anniversary of its new constitution, "The German Republic, the German Fatherland, the German People, Hail!"—United Synagog Recorder.

to the parents that he be clothed in a pair of mannish trousers and tams save the model and others embarrassment. The next day the youth came back in trousers and starched collar and began the serious part of his studies.

For six years he studied art at the Academy and scholastic knowledge at the College of the City of New York. His drawings steadily improved and he began to find himself more at home artistically, in the portrayal of his own people. When at twenty-two he entered the competition for a scholarship at the Academy his entry was a portrait of a rabbi. It won him the prize.

The scholarship won him two years' tuition and expenses in any European capital art centre. Auerbach-Levy chose Paris. He passed safely through the fires of artistic Parisian life, and came back a full-fledged artist. The Academy where he studied entrusted him with the teaching of advanced classes, and he has had fine success in the world at large. He has specialized in etchings, and his productions are widely known and enjoy a wide sale, which is something that does not enter into the schedule of every art worker.

In one of our literary searches we came across a letter written by Martin Luther, the reformer, that is interesting enough to reprint here. We are aware that even by the widest stretch of imagination and facts Luther cannot be accepted by us, but this letter has intimate reference, as you can see:

"To my dearly beloved housewife, Katherine Luther . . . Dear Kathie: I became extremely weak when I was close to Eisleben, but it was my own fault. However, hadst thou been there thou wouldst have said that either the Jews or their God were at the bottom of it. For we had to pass through a village close to Eisleben, where many Jews lived, and perhaps they blew upon me, for there is no doubt that at the village a strong wind blew in the back of the carriage, penetrating through my doctor's hat, threatening to turn my brain into ice.

"When the principal matters are arranged I must endeavor to banish the Jews. Count Albrecht does not like them and has tried to expose them, but as yet no one has meddled with them. If God will, I shall help Count Albrecht, and speak about them from the pulpit. I drink Naumberg beer, which you praised so highly at Mansfeld, and it agrees with me excellently."

To give Luther the benefit of charitable thought, it must be said that he was of the peasantry and never quite recovered from the superstitions inculcated in him in his youth.

With the coming of the Moscow Art Theatre to America it is worth while mentioning that Alla Nazimova, the pride of the stage and the movies—particularly the movies—was a member of that company, said to be the most perfect organization of actors in the world.

Before Nazimova procured so much space in the "fan" magazines she was really a great actress. In fact, she was one of the greatest in Russia and played leading roles in the world-famous productions of the Moscow Art Theatre, creating many of these roles, notably "Regina" in Ibsen's "Ghosts."

Nazimova was born in Odessa and educated in a Catholic school. Her début was made at nineteen in Moscow, and she achieved her greatest fame while [illegible] and Orleneff, with the Moscow Art Theatre and on tour in the [illegible].

Alderman Louis Cohen, of Liverpool, who passed away last month in the seventy-seventh year of his age, was the most prominent Jew in that city. He had a long municipal career and served as Lord Mayor in 1899-1900, being the first Jew to occupy that office. Among his many benefactions, he recently established a chair of dentistry at the Liverpool University with an endowment of £15,000. He became one of the trustees under his uncle's will, and was instrumental, out of a fund left by his uncle, in rebuilding the David Lewis Northern Hospital at Liverpool at a cost of £100,000, and the David Lewis Hostel at a cost of £50,000. In addition, there was the provision of the Liverpool Queen Victoria Jubilee Nurses' Home, of which the deceased was chairman.

On October 1 the State Institute of the Jewish Theater in Moscow opened a special school for Jewish actors, under the direction of M. Grossowski. The purpose of this school will be to prepare competent actors for the Yiddish theater. In addition to the general training, including elocution, mimicry, fencing, musical knowledge, etc., the pupils will be taught the Yiddish language and literature, Yiddish diction and the history of the Yiddish theater. Pupils will be accepted on the recommendation of the Jewish departments in the local education offices. The examinations will be in Yiddish, political education and general elementary education, and special acting qualifications.

Prominent German Junkers, land owners of East Prussia and other provinces, have applied to a Jewish employment bureau in Berlin for Jewish land workers, stating that experiments made last year in Ukrainia and Poland demonstrated the intelligence and skill of such employees and workers. Among the land owners who applied for Jewish help was a brother of Wahle, the well known anti-Semitic agitator, who has carried on an intensive campaign against the further admission of Jewish immigration.

Several Dutch Jews figure in the Queen's birthday honors list, among them being: Mr. S. M. Meyer, chairman of the Jewish community of Groningen; Mr. E. Gerson, Amsterdam; Mr. G. Hijmans of Maastricht, Mr. H. Andriesse, Brussels, and Captain J. Feitsma, who are made Knights of the Order of Orange Nassau.

The Jewish population of Poland numbers five million, according to last year's figures. Jews of Eastern Galicia are included in this figure, which is said to be much higher than was usually believed. Taking the most recent census figures, of twenty million inhabitants for the new Poland, the Jews constitute a fifth part of the population.

A mass meeting of the Jewish citizens of Ottawa was held on Sunday afternoon in the King Edward Avenue Institute to discuss plans for carrying on the Talmud Torah. It was decided to form a new executive composed of ten members each from the King Edward Avenue and Rideau Street Synagogs, and five each from the Murray Street and James Street Congregations; these representatives having full power to act for their respective congregations. The present board will continue to function until the new executive shall have been appointed. The president, Mr. A. J. Freiman, occupied the chair, and outlined the needs of the school. Rabbi Berger made an eloquent appeal for support for the Talmud Torah by the whole community, and Mr. C. I. Finn, for many years an ardent worker for the school, also urged upon all present, the vital need of financial assistance in order to keep up the good work hitherto accomplished.

A largely attended meeting of the Hadassah Chapter was held on Sunday afternoon, with Mrs. L. Leiken in the chair. It was decided to hold the bazaar which was postponed from the spring, about the middle of November. The following convenors have been appointed: The chief convenors, Mrs. L. Leiken and Mrs. J. J. Marks; grocery booth, Mrs. B. Smith; candy, Mrs. B. Goldfield and Miss Pearl Goldfield; fancy work and infants' booth, Mrs. L. Leiken and Mrs. B. Pearl; home cookery, Mrs. D. Epstein and Mrs. M. Shenkman; towels and aprons, Mrs. J. Nathanson, Mrs. J. Golden and Mrs. Harry Cooper; handkerchiefs and hosiery, Mrs. I. Salter and Mrs. Marcus; flowers, Mrs. L. Davis and Mrs. Chacham; high tea, Mrs. J. Holzman; smokes, Mrs. I. Zivian; fish-pond, Mrs. I. Rosenthal; fortune-telling, Mrs. A. Slone; books and stationery, Mrs. Harry Freedman and Mrs. A. Belman; dancing, Y.M. & Y.W.H.A. punch board, Mrs. H. Rosenes and Mrs. M. L. Diamond; donation booth, Mrs. J. J. Marks.

The second day of the bazaar will be children's day, when all children accompanied by their parents will be given free admission. Special attractions will also be arranged for that day. Reports on the Zionist and Hadassah Conventions held in Ottawa last July were read by Mrs. A. H. Coplan, Mrs. J. Nathanson and Mrs. I. Zivian. It was decided to send out mite boxes for the Chaluzim fund to all the Jewish homes in the city. The following ladies are looking after the distribution of these boxes: Mesdames D. Mirsky, M. Schenkman, B. Pearl, A. H. Coplan, D. Epstein, A. Chacham.

There was a large attendance at the first meeting of the season of the Bnai Brith, which was held on Saturday evening in the Oddfellows' Hall. The president, Dr. H. Dover, who was in the chair, read a very interesting report of the seventeenth annual convention of the Bnai Brith held during the summer at Worcester, Mass. The former treasurer, Mr. Alec. Lerner, having left the city, Mr. A. Shaffer was elected to take over his duties. The organization has undertaken to launch a membership campaign for the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society, whose Ottawa office is in charge of Mr. J. Zivian. The campaign will start next Sunday evening with a large mass meeting in the King Edward Institute. The committee in charge are Chairman Mr. J. Holzman, and Messrs. B. Fogle and K. Smith.

The thirty-ninth Boy Scout Troop, composed of thirty-five Jewish boys, which was recently reorganized, will in the future be under the supervision of the Bnai Brith, who will lend them financial aid to enable them to continue their work. The following committee is in charge: Messrs. A. Shaffer, Jess Abelson, B. Goldfield, Dr. A. Slone, Dr. H. Dover and Dr. J. Nathanson. Mr. H. Segalowitz will take over the duties of scoutmaster.

Reports of the various committees were read, and an interesting program was outlined for the coming season by Mr. M. Freedman, chairman of the entertainment committee. Arrangements are under way for the second annual ball to take place shortly. Very favorable reports were read by Mr. Levey, chairman of the sick committee and Mr. B. Fogle, chairman of the Big Brotherhood movement. Several new members were admitted.

Twelve ladies, comprising the collection committee of the local Hadassah Chapter, are busy collecting the pledges made on Yom Kippur for the Chaluzim and hospital funds of Palestine. It is expected that seven or eight hundred dollars will be realized from the members of the King Edward Avenue School. A cheque for eighty dollars was received from the pledges made at the Murray Street Synagog, and a hundred and forty-one dollars were raised at the James Street Synagog.

Miss Rae Fine was in Montreal over the week-end, the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. M. Fine.

The Novelty Dance given at the King Edward Institute on Sunday evening was a huge success. There was one of the largest and gayest crowds ever seen at a similar affair, everyone seemed in the best of humor, and the evening showed that Y.M.H.A. affairs are apparently going to be more popular than ever. The committee to whom the credit of the successful entertainment is due are: Mr. Harold Pearl, chairman, and the Messrs. Dave Bilsky, Cecil Slonemsky, A. Millar, R. Pearl, N. Abelson, Gordon Caplan, B. Edelson and E. Lightstone, and the Misses Mary and Bea Benwick, Fanny Smith, Hilda Kaminsky, Anne Goluh, Fanny Feller, R. Edelstein, and Mrs. B. Edelson. Rabbi Joseph Marcus, who is a student at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, was in Otrawa last week. On Saturday he preached in the King Edward Avenue Synagog on "The Future of Judaism." "The spiritual food which will preserve the Jewish life is the Torah," said Rabbi Marcus; "the Torah is the store-house of the loftiest teachings, the treasure-house of the sublimest ideals to which humanity can ever rise. What nutriment is to the physical existence, education is to the spiritual life. Education is the best guarantee for life in the future." On Sunday, Simchat Torah, Rabbi Marcus took as the subject one appropriate to the occasion: "Joy in the Jewish Religion," and showed how joyousness was an essential part of Judaism. "Ours is no gloomy, sad religion," said the rabbi. "We are told to worship the Lord with thankfulness." On Sunday evening Rabbi Marcus attended a meeting of the Ottawa branch of the Sinai League, and addressed the members on the Jewish cry for justice throughout the ages.
